

Welcome

Louie S. Hehman

Hi! My name is Louie Hehman, and I have been playing music in the Catholic Church for my entire life. Originally from Kentucky, I first started playing at my local parish in high school and got my first job as an organist while in college. Since then, I have played at a number of churches of different congregations, including a two-year stint as an accompanist under the great Catholic music composer Carey Landry. I hold a Master of Music degree from Butler University and just started my Doctor of the Musical arts degree at the University of South Carolina, where I plan to focus on piano pedagogy and jazz studies. In addition to my love of Catholic music, I am passionate about classical, jazz, rock, and folk, and enjoy playing keyboards and accordion in bands of all kinds. Aside from music, my interests include reading (especially history and philosophy), really old movies, and spending way too much money on fancy dinners I can't afford. Oh yes, one more important detail... I am immeasurably blessed to be engaged to a wonderful young woman named Anna, who apparently went against her better judgement in agreeing to someday marry a scruffy piano player!
